CHANGING OF THE GUARD

THE appointment of Nitzav Aharon Sela as the new Inspector-General of Police comes at a time when the police are being subjected to mounting criticism over the rise in crime, and particularly over the increase in the number of armed robberies and holdups.

For eight years, outgoing Inspector-General Pinhas Koppel Sought to improve conditions in the force and attract qualified men to serve in this difficult, demanding and often thankless service. He was fully supported by Police Ministers Eliahu Sasson and in the past three son and—in the past three years—Shlomo Hillel, Both Min-isters have campaigned vigorously for higher pay and improved fringe benefits for the force.

Many factors operated to make the Israel policemen's task more difficult. Since 1967 there have been new security prob-lems growing out of the ad-ministered territories' population of over one million.

Lenient judges often frus-trated the efforts of the police to track down criminals. Legal icopholes helped white-collar criminals and lement laws sided procurers, careless drivers and even drug users.

But the major problem was that of a growth in social com-munal and religious tensions and the general rise of violence in our society. With less tension on the borders, social pressures have emerged that often tend to choose the police as their first point of attack.

At the same time there was no parallel growth in the size of the force. On the contrary, a booming economy meant a decline in qualified recruits. The number of new policemen often failed to keep pace with the

Sciaky fired from Education Ministry

The Cabinet yesterday dismissed Dr. Avner Sciaky of the N.R.P. from his post as Deputy Minister of Education for having voted in the Knesset last week in favour of the Agudat Yisrael "Who's a Jew" bill in defiance of coalition discipline. There is no precedent for such a dismissal of a Deputy Minister.

Later, but before the Cabinet session was over, a letter of resignation from Dr. Sciaky reached his superior, Deputy Premier and Edu-cation Minister Yigal Allon, in the

Dr. Sciaky hinted in an interview later that he may quit his National Religious Party Knesset fac-tion (which did not defy the Government last week, but abstained with its permission) and set up a one-man faction.

The Cabinet yesterday did not discuss the complicated political background to the Agude private members hall which was defeated last week and which aimed at amending the Law of Return to stipulate Halachic (Orthodox) conversion as the sole statutory conversion process. After the NRP. got Cabinet authority to abstain and decided to force all the 12man faction too the line, Dr. Sciaky insisted that his conscience did not permit him to flout the

The Cabinet handled Dr. Scieky's vote solely as a constitutional issue. Its decision noted that the Cabinet had applied the principle of collective Cabinet responsibility to the "Who's a Jaw" vote only three days before the bill was debated. ('Accordingly, Dr. Sciaky had the right to abstain but no more). Former U.S. Treasury Secretary John Connally shared a joke with | sible running mate for Mr. Nixon in the November election. At right President Nixon Friday at the Western White House in San Clemente, Sen. George McGovern and his running-mate, Sen. Thomas F. Connally, a Democrat, has been mentioned as a pos- to the closing session of the Democratic Convention.

Does Nixon have it all sewn up?

THE nomination of Senator George residential candidate must be regarded as one of the most extraordinary events in recent American politics. Six months ago not one political commentator in the United States gave him a chance. Even when the delegates assembled in Miami Beach last weekend, Mc-Govern was opposed by many of the most celebrated leaders of the Democratic Party — not only the other candidates but the big union leaders, scores of Democratic members of Congress, and many Democratic governors. On the first night of the Convention all this opposition was shown to be made of straw. McGovern romped home.

His nomination implies a massive change in the nature of the De-mocratic Party. In 1968, at the last Democratic Convention in Chicago, one congressman made a speech attacking people with long hair, the kind of people who, when he spoke, were assembling in the street and about to be clubbed down by Mayor Daley's rioting police. That was one of the few times, in Chicago, that the Convention was united and alive, cheering and shouting.

Long hair

This time many of the delegates to the Convention had long hair, many of them were black, and many of them were women. Most of themhold views that are anathema to the old-time Party regulars, who tried, and falled to promote a stop-McGovern movement in Miami Beach - on Vietnam, on welfare, on race. Miami Beach.

Some of the people who were outside at Chicago were on the inside at Miami Beach. Abbie Hoffman, one of the Chicago radical leaders, was sitting in the Press stands with a media admission ticket around his neck, paying close attention to the proceedings. Rennie Davis, another Chicago orgamzer and the fellow who staged

These the structure of the Democratic Party — a structure that they themselves helped to shatter - all of them calculated to during the primaries by the way they pushed aside, or ignored scare the wits out of solid, middle Americans — had never before got within a mile of the agenda at any previous serious political gathering in this country, let alone or angered the old party regulars. Of course, many of the delegates who nominated McGovern were not radicals. But some of them were: and a majority certainly seemed sympathetic to what are regarded in the United States as radical causes. The Governor of Florida, a passionate man named Reubin Askew, a liberal in a conservative state, talked in his keynote address about the sear Tobalities of protest in the U.S. Almost every shade of that protest was in the hall at

Former President Lyndon Johnson's name was not mentioned once during the first two days of the Convention. Mayor Daley of Chicago, who after all was the city boss who got President John F. Kennedy elected in 1960 by means of a few extra votes happily discovered at the last minute, could not even get his delegation seated. No one would have believed that the Democratic Party could have so dramatically changed its nature in four years.

Nobody was right about McGovern's chances of winning the nomination. Nobody expected such an orderly convention. Nobody expect-ed that the young McGovernites would so readily accept the fact that their leader must start wheeling and dealing and trimming in an attempt to put the Party into McGovern also told his people some kind of unified shape for the order November election.

> McGovern has alienated the Jewish vote by his statements on the Middle East and the Catholic vote by the way his supporters talk about abortion. He has alarmed the Wall Street bankers who think he knows nothing about economics; he has done little to calm the fears of middle America about law and order; he has frightened many bluecollar workers by talking about rash cuts in defence expenditure, which to them means shutting down defence plants. He has infuriated Mayor Daley, whose help he must have to win Hinois, which is essential to his election chances. He sems to have little chance of carrying Texas, another key state.

It seems barely conceivable that McGovern will be able to do what safe: that the coming four months are going to produce the most ab-sorbing presidential election campaign in modern American history.

The Indians were also pushing towards an agreement under which the present cease-fire line in Kashmir resulting from the 14-day war last December would become an international boundary, thus settling the fate of the territory finally, although this would mean the loss of some 30,000 square miles of Kashmiri territory on the Pakistani side of the line.

This is an important point, for New Delhi believes that the main cause of muddied India-Pakistan relations is the constant meddling of mischief-making foreign powers in the affairs of the subcontinent. U.N. intervention in Kashmir. sought originally by India, is believed to have aggravated the problem instead of helping solve it. This. is the view expressed by an official spokesman after the summit. If the Simla summit has temporarily taken the heat off Mr. Bhutto in Islamabad, this is another gain for India. For New Delhi would prefer to do business with a politician who seeks popular sanction for his role of chief executive than a military dictator surrounded by hawkish bureaucrats.

na when he should be talking about the threat to jobs from foreign competition, one of them said. Many members of Congress are extremely anxious about the McGovcalled "drag down" effect will take them to defeat in November along with the candidate.

And yet something very strange has already happened in American politics, as anyone who saw 10 minutes of the Convention on television must have realized. The question is whether this invisible earthquake will turn out to be temporary or permanent. Is Mc-Govern just the candidate of the Party because of a rearrangement of the Party rules, or will he turn out to be a genuine Party leader whose election marks genuine change in the course of the Democratic Party?

Crystal balls

he has to do to beat Nixon: reassure labour, keep his youth support, pacify middle America, get back the Jewish votes he has lost, put the Party organization together again and recreate the old alliances so that Daley really helps in Illinois and the big labour unions shell out money for the cause. However, a little humility is in order. Crystal balls are (or should be) temporarily out of style in American political circles. A lot of Democrats who have been openly hostile to McGovern in the past few months are now pinning on McGovern buttons. Perhaps after November he will never be heard of again. Perhaps he will be President. Only one prediction seems

Where the rules are there to be broken

BEIRUT (UPI). - Spectators in a Beirut cinema recently burst into applause at the end of the spectacular chase sequence in the film Bullitt." It was a spontaneous tribute to professional driving from a people who can claim to be skilled and daring amateur exponents.

At its best, driving in the capitals of the Middle East is as classical a sport as bull-fighting. Narrow streets and a cavalier approach to road rules have given drivers lightning reflexes and the constant threat of death on the road has made pedestrians as nimble as mountain goats.

The contest is unremitting and the only factors likely to take the fun out of a pastime unmatched for excitement are death and the possibility of paralysis by car conges-tion — a situation that is becoming more likely every day.

In 1946 there were 8,000 cars in all of Lebanon, a country of 1.5 million people. By 1961 the total had soured 700 per cent to 56,000, and today the figure is close to 150,000.

A Beirut magazine worked out that the capital's business district, made up mostly of narrow, twisting streets, could handle 1,500 cars (Rubinger) a day but gets an average of 4,500 more or "five square metres for each

New accident figures may be good news

THE road safety statistics for the first half of this year give reason for cautious optimism. From the beginning of January to the end of June there were 7,316 accidents with injuries, only slightly more than the 7,304 which occurred during the same period in 1971. The Central Bureau Statistics reports that this compares with a per cent increase for the first six months of 1971 over 1970.

The number of injured in the first half of this year was only one per cent more than last year -- 10,205 compared to 10,395.

While the numbers of accidents and injured have remained static - in spite of the steadily rising number of motor vehicles, there was a nine per cent drop in the number of persons killed. A. total of 280 people were killed on the roads in the first half of this year, compared with 310 in the same period last year.

Asked to comment on the figures, road safety officials were noncommital and cautious. period of survey is too short and it's too early to draw any conclusions," was a typical remark.

We must at least wait till the end of the year to see whether the trend continues, before we can draw any conclusions," one official said.

Another official guessed that perhaps recent road improvement work had something to do with the improved statistics.

As if to underline the caution with which statistics for a short period - such as six months must be treated, the figures comparing the months of June and May this year go directly against the trend of greater stability and even improve-

In June police registered 1,304 accidents with injured, compared with 1,202 in May, an increase of over seven per cent. This increase is unexpectedbig, even allowing for a seasonal adjustment between the two months. The number of injured for June rose by more than 15 per cent over May, 1,925 to 1,668.

In complete contrast to the overall down-trend in the number of killed, there was an increase from 28 fatalities in May to 58 in June. (There were 37 fatalities in April.)

same period last year. While the authorities attribute the decline largely to seatbelt legislation, sceptical observers point out that it is too early to say why deaths have declined. Factors such as the weather, daylight saving and economic factors leading to lower kilometrage and less alcohol consumed by drivers, and chance, could account for variations.

Since seatbelt wearing was made compulsory, the wearing rate has reached more than 90 per cent in some states. In Queensland a wearing rate of 94 per cent has been claimed and a decline in road acci-

> Mr. Andreassend said: "The wearing rate appears to vary with the length of the trip and the socioeconomic status of the driver. The quality of wearing was not very good. Most drivers observed during the survey did not have their belts correctly adjusted."

Women drivers

The main reason given for wearing seatbelts was "safety," with "law" being given as a reason more frequently by women drivers and drivers in older age groups.

Another factor to be considered in evaluating claims about the effectiveness of seatbelts is that all road deaths have fallen, not just deaths of car drivers and passengers. The figures indicate that persons not affected by seatbelts, such as pedestrians and motorcyclists, have had a bigger drop in road deaths than drivers and passengers. Despite the caution in attributing the improvement to seatbelts, the figures are encouraging. According to Andreassend, the reduction in fatalities could go as high as 50 per In 1970, Australia had one of the

have been quickly put to rest. Official spokesmen have rightly pointed out that Israel is under no constraint to follow Britain's lead. The British market accounts for little over 10 per cent of our exports, and even for little over 20 per cent of our citrus sales. By reducing the value of our currency in order to keep our sterling proceeds, we would lose more in other markets. A fillip to exports, which devaluation could provide, would be of no use, because even now export orders exceed possible production in most cases. Moreover, an eventual inflow of foreign funds which devaluation could trigger off - by making local prices cheaper for investors and speculators abroad would unload yet more purchasing bursting from excess liquidity. IMMIGRANT PARENTS

This summer there are special summer courses in Hebrew (ulpanim) for new immigrant students. Studies have commenced at the beginning of the summer vacation and will continue for about 5 weeks.

At these courses, your children can learn Hebrew, Judaic studies, and general studies, and will further participate in social activities.

Courses for those ages 6-13 will take place (for the most part) in the school nearest their home.

Courses for those aged 14-17 will take place in the following locations: Jerusalem, Tel Ayiv, Haifa, Netanya, Nazareth, the religious Hassidic-Youth village, Kfar Batya (Ra'anana), Neve Amiel (Sde Ya'akov), Kfar Habad, Or Hahayim in B'nei Brak, Eshel Hanessi, Ne'urim, Alonei Yitzhak, Ramat Hadassah (Tivon), Wiyari Yasyim and Nahalal. Kiryat Yearim and Nahalal.

Students who have not yet registered are requested to apply, for registration, at their school, or at the school for which they are registered for the next school year.

policy is irrelevant. Instead, he re- level. marked that if our parity is in need of adjustment, it should be upward. In a way, this must be understood as an admission that the devaluation of last August was a mistake or a failure. That it strengthened inflationary pressure is obvious. That neither of which has been applied for fear of the trade unions opposition — is equally clear. But it is the monetary implications of Mr. Sanbar's remarks which are of especial interest. A revaluation of the pound could help check inflation where devaluation - the classic remedy - failed. It would encourage imports, discourage exports, increase the home supply of goods and services at current, or perhaps even lower prices, and would also reduce the inflow of foreign funds converted into local currency because everything here would become more expensive for foreigners. We would need no C.o.L. allowances and no price subsidies because we would be better off at our current income level. We could thus choke inflation, not by reducing effective demand, but by increasing supply. Of course, such a remedy would be a costly matter. Our foreign trade deficit would soar, and we would have fewer dollars flowing in to cover it. But that should not worry us as long as recourse can be taken to somebody's charity. Or so we have held.

LONDON (FWF) .-THE possibility of romanizing the various parts of China Chinese language seems to have Fortunately for the Chinese, there recently aroused interest in the is only one written language. Western world, especially since Kuo Throughout this vast country, every Mo-jo, President of the Chinese character is written in the same zine in Peking that there was a plan of communication to "replace the Chinese characters form in China objectively, the anthe French and English.

This is the paramount to utter a vast number of monosyllables in the right order, coherently and comprehensively.

Confusing tones

It must be pointed out, however, that the more difficult part of letters "ma" mean "mother spoken Chinese lies in its tonal pronounced in the first tone differences. In Mandarin (the offi- in the second tone, "horse" cial spoken language) alone there are four tones which is confusing enough. Then there are eight tones in the Fukienese dialect and nine in Cantonese, not to mention many other dialects spoken by people in

But difficulty arises when it comes with the Roman letters." But can to the spoken language. Diversified this aim be achieved in the fore- dialects cause the Chinese to proseeable future? If one examines nounce the same word completely various aspects of the language re- differently — as different as, say,

This is the paramount obstacle Different from most modern lan- which is still to be overcome before guages, Chinese is ideographic, pic- Chinese can be romanized. Take the torial and monosyllabic. More than name of Chairman Mao, for instance. 40,000 Chinese characters (words) In written Chinese, it consists of form the total vocabulary which has three characters which are visually been in use over the past 4,000 the same to any literate Chinese. years. Each character consists of Once the leader's name is romanized radicals denoting pronunciation and it all depends on the dialect used meaning respectively. To write a by the person who is doing the Chinese character is like drawing a actual romanization. In Mandarin miniature picture: putting dots, his name will be the familiar Mao strokes and lines together in the Tse-tung. But in Fukienese it will traditionally symmetrical way. To be Mor Dieh-doong while in Canspeak Chinese means that one has tonese it becomes Moo Chak-tong.

Mother, curse

Tonal difference may be a lesser in view of romanization Still, it has to be dealt with carefully. For instance, the two Roman pronounced in the first tone, "jute' in the second tone, "horse" in the third tone and "curse" in the fourth tone. A slur of the tongue can be very embarrassing, especially for a foreigner.

In fact, the unification of the spoken language has always been an aim for both Nationalist and Communist regimes in China. When Mao Tse-tung came to power in 1949, a Language Reform Committee, headed by Wu Yuchang, a veteran Communist, was formed under the Central Government. In the early 1950s the main concern of this committee was still to propagate the National Language. Later on, to co-ordinate with the programme aimed at wiping out illiteracy, the Language Reform Committee undertook a new venture. In the first stage it chose some 2,000 characters which were common in daily usage and simplified their written form by reducing or omitting some of the dots, lines or

Backed by the party and the government, these simplified characters gradually replaced the original ones in writing and printing. But in pronunciation, they remained

When people began to master this first group of simplified characters, the committee introduced others. Up to now, about 5,000 Chinese characters have been simplified by Peking's language reform. This process has taken about 20 years.

At this rate, it could take another 140 years to simplify the remaining 35,000 characters less commonly used than those already simplified. And before the romanization programme could be fully implemented, a requirement would be that China's 750 million people would have to speak one unified language.

TEL AVIV. - Neither the Israel consumer nor the farmer is beneat ing economically from this year bumper fruit crop, Fruit Production and Marketing Board officials and here yesterday.

The general manager of the Board, Mr. Yosef Goress, told a pre-conference that, due to a 5,000 at fruit surplus since April, the farmer are getting rock-bottom prices. But consumers are still paying relatively high prices for fruit, he said.

One of the reasons for this is the destruction of much of the surpluss. Mr. Garess said. Nevertheless, the average Israeli - siready the larg
